BRAZIL'S SENATE DISMISSES ROUSSEFF FOR BREAKING BUDGET LAWS

Brazil's Senate removed President Dilma Rousseff from office on Wednesday for breaking budgetary laws, ending an impeachment process that has polarized the scandal-plagued country and paralyzed its politics for nine months. Senators voted 61-20 to convict Rousseff for illegally using money from state banks to boost public spending, putting an end to 13 years of leftist Workers Party rule in Latin America's largest economy. Conservative Michel Temer, the former vice president who has run Brazil since Rousseff's suspension in May, will be sworn in on Wednesday to serve out the remainder of the presidential term through 2018. A separate Senate vote will be held on whether Rousseff will be barred from public office for eight years. REUTERS

NORTH KOREA EXECUTES VICE PREMIER IN LATEST PURGE: SOUTH

North Korea has executed its vice premier for education and rebuked two high-ranking officials, South Korea said on Wednesday, which, if true, would mark a new series of measures by leader Kim Jong Un to discipline top aides. Kim took power in 2011 after the death of his father, Kim Jong Il, and his consolidation of power has included purges and executions of top officials, South Korean officials have said. South Korea's Unification Ministry spokesman Jeong Joon-hee said the government had confirmed the execution of the education official, Kim Yong Jin, "through various channels" but declined to provide details. Kim Yong Chol, the influential head of the North's United Front Department which handles inter-Korean relations, was made to undergo "revolutionary measures," Jeong told a briefing. Another ruling party official in the propaganda department was also reprimanded, Jeong said. REUTERS

FIRST US-CUBA PASSENGER FLIGHT IN DECADES ARRIVES

A JetBlue plane landed in the central Cuban city of Santa Clara on Wednesday, becoming the first scheduled commercial passenger flight from the United States to the island in more than a half century. The arrival of the Airbus A320 from Fort Lauderdale, Florida, opened another chapter in the Obama administration's efforts to improve ties and increase trade and travel with the former Cold War foe. The Obama administration hopes regular scheduled flights will usher in an era of more routine travel to and from the Communist-ruled island. U.S. Transportation Secretary Anthony Foxx, JetBlue Chief Executive Officer Robin Hayes, other officials and journalists were aboard the plane. Regular travelers, including some of Cuban descent, occupied nearly half the seats. REUTERS

Activists chain selves to front door of City Hall in Cambridge

Four Black Lives Matter activists face disorderly conduct charges after the protest.

CHRIS CAESAR
@MetroBOS
chris.caesar@metro.us

Four Black Lives Matter protesters were arrested Wednesday outside of Cambridge City Hall after chaining themselves to the front entrance for about nine hours while demanding that local political leaders take actions to make more affordable housing available in the city.

The four protesters — two adult men and two women who were both minors — were connected to each other by large tubes in which they interlocked their arms. Two of them also fastened themselves to the front door with U-shaped bicycle locks snapped around their necks before regular business hours.

They, and dozens of other protesters who joined them on the nearby front lawn, declared Cambridge City Hall "condemned by the authority of the people of Cambridge" and presented a list of demands to city political leaders.

Authorities were able to remove the door handle and move the protesters off to the side of the building's entrance, Cambridge Police spokesman Jeremy Warnick said, though they later returned to block the entrance.

"We did not have plans for arresting them," Warnick wrote in an email. "However, after they were positioned off to the side of the main entrance [after initially locking themselves to the main door] and collectively moved back in front of the main entrance, we gave them several opportunities to move. They made no intentions of moving away from that location and they were ultimately arrested."

The two adult protesters, Andrew King, 30, and Abraham Lateiner, 34, both of Cambridge, face disorderly conduct charges. Lateiner was also charged with interfering with a police officer.

The two young women were charged with disorderly conduct, though their names were not released because of their age.

Throughout the day, a number of city officials spoke to the crowd in an attempt to assure them that affordable housing was an issue the city took seriously.

"I just want you to know that this is important to us, and we've been on this for a while," city councilor Marc McGovern said, noting many on the council supported a 20 percent rate for affordable housing in Cambridge. Last month, the council received the findings of a report which made that recommendation.

"We've been following the discussion about raising the percentage of affordable housing...for a while," Black Lives Matter Cambridge activist Stephanie Guirand said. "We were told that the city council was leaning in the direction of 20 percent [affordable housing], and we wanted to support them, but also push them a little bit toward that goal."

"We don't have money to buy politicians," she added. "So we have to go hard."

Guirand said protesters were concerned that the city's affordable housing rate had not been raised in nearly two decades, contributing to widespread gentrification that disproportionately affects the poor and communities of color.

"People who don't work in biotechnology or big professors at the universities here can't afford to stay here," Guirand said.

Rev. Paul Robeson Ford of the Union Baptist Church in Cambridge said he attended the protest as both a supporter of the Black Lives Matter movement and local community leader.

"The reality is that the movement for black lives has always been — since its inception — about more than just racist police violence and police brutality," he said. "In particular, it is a movement for black lives that has developed more and more... [and] there is an understanding, and a more acute focus, on all of the issues that negatively impact — not just black lives — but the lives of poor people, and disproportionately people of color. Cambridge is no exception."

Wednesday's protest comes about a year and a half after the "Somerville 18" locked arms in trash cans filled with concrete and blocked I-93 during rush-hour traffic in January 2015.

There were 29 people arrested at that protest, with all avoiding jail time for related disorderly conduct and resisting arrest charges.

Demands

Those demands included calls for:

- A requirement for developers building new homes with more than nine units to make "at least 25 percent of the units affordable."
- Permitting MIT to build housing for its 5,500 graduate and postgraduate students, a move activists said would "open up more units for existing housing and provide family-size units."
- A demand that free land owned by the city be used to build affordable housing and develop public spaces, and not be sold to private developers.
- An establishment of a rent-to-own program in the city, noting "there needs to be a better and more defined pathway to home-ownership for low income Cantabrigians."

Hundreds of BU freshman arrive early to do service

A program lets new students learn the city while helping out with social justice causes.

CANDID CAMPUS

Metro's look inside Boston's college campuses

Classes at Boston University don't begin until Tuesday, but 750 freshman and transfer students have already moved in to get a head start. Before sitting in calculus or economics classrooms, incoming students are learning about their new city by working as volunteers in different communities through the school's FYSOP program.

FYSOP stands for First-Year Student Outreach Project and it began at BU in 1989. First-year BU students make the trip to campus a week early in order to spend some time learning about social justice service and volunteering in one of 10 focus areas: abilities, animals, children, elders, environment, food justice, gender and sexuality, homelessness and housing, human rights, and public health.

"I think a lot of first-years might have done community service in high school, but it wasn't necessarily social justice focused," said Eva Kennedy, a 21-year-old BU senior who is working as a staff leader for the program this year. "They've never talked about things like homelessness, sexual assault, abuse, and I think they're surprised by how heavy it is."

Students tend to be receptive to the new situations, Kennedy added. Though she wasn't able to participate in FYSOP when she was a freshman — her summer schedule meant she had to sign up for the BU orientation that coincides with FYSOP week — she's worked as a staff leader every year since.

This year, she's leading the "homelessness and housing" team, which will visit FYSOP community partners like local shelters for its service days at the end of the week. FYSOP splits the week before Labor Day into education days on Monday and Tuesday, when the students learn about their focus issues, and then service days with hands-on involvement on Wednesday through Friday.

COURTESY OF BOSTON UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY SERVICE CENTER

Participants in "homelessness and housing" got to hear from a woman who had been homeless and now, with the help of Pine Street Inn, has been able to get housing as well as get sober. She had run away from home at 13, Kennedy said, to escape a sexually and physically abusive father. She got involved with prostitution and eventually heroin, but now has her life back on track.

"She has obviously been through so much in her life, and hearing that is so much more effective than just hearing statistics about homelessness or people in poverty," Kennedy said. "Now she has a positive life and is able to speak to people about her experiences. It's hard not to get so much out of that, and I think all of the first-years got a lot."

FYSOP does more than give students an opportunity to make a contribution to their new city. It actually helps them become true Boston residents, FYSOP program manager Stefanie Grossano said.

"Not only are [students] engaging with the city through service, but they're able to listen to and hear authentic voices, and I think that's the best way to understand what it means to be a Bostonian," she said. "And it's a way to travel to other neighborhoods first years otherwise wouldn't go to."

Princeton Review names UMass Amherst top campus for dining hall eats

The most important part of a college campus might just be the dining hall — there's a reason the "freshman 15" weight gain is so well known — and students at the University of Massachusetts Amherst have apparently hit the culinary jackpot.

The Princeton Review gave the college its vote as having the best campus food, Boston magazine pointed out. To celebrate, the university mascot, Sam the Minuteman, went on the "Today" show Tuesday morning to serve such dining-hall samples as pulled pork sliders and mille-feuille, a French pastry.

"We're pleased to see that the Princeton Review has recognized what all of us at UMass Amherst have long known: When it comes to college food, UMass Dining can't be beat," Chancellor Kumble Subbaswamy said in a statement.

For the 25th edition of their best colleges ranking, The Princeton Review surveyed 143,000 students from across the country about a variety of topics, from best campus food to best career services and even happiest students. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Fenway honors Big Papi with a life-size Lego statue of slugger

David Ortiz stands with a statue of himself. GETTY IMAGES

The Red Sox are really pulling out all the stops for David Ortiz's final year on the team: free "500" necklaces, Big Papi bobbleheads and both "Papi Gnome" and "Build-A-Papi" nights at Fenway Park.

Wednesday was no different, with the ball park honoring its big hitter with a life-size statue of himself made entirely of Legos. Because why the hell not?

The statue took 34,510 bricks and 290 hours to construct, Steve Saleeba, from the PR firm Elevate, said. Lego Master Builder Erik Varszegi oversaw its construction at the company's North American headquarters in Enfield, Connecticut.

The dang thing weighs 170 pounds and stands a few inches taller than the real Ortiz, at 6-foot-7.

Baseball fans got a chance to see the statue for the first time attending the team's home game Wednesday, but Ortiz and his son D'Angelo got a special chance to preview the piece beforehand.

Fittingly, another piece, representing Ortiz and his son in Lego portrait form, was also unveiled. You can check it out for yourself at Fenway Park's Kid's Concourse. CHRIS CAESAR

BRIEF

Clinton touts 'American exceptionalism' in appeal to Republicans

Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton, speaking to a U.S. veterans group on Wednesday, made an open appeal to Republican and independent voters concerned about rival Donald Trump's national security credentials and his fitness for office.

"This election shouldn't be about ideology. It's not just about differences over policy," Clinton told an American Legion convention in Cincinnati. "It truly is about who has the experience and the temperament to serve as president and commander in chief."

Clinton, a former secretary of state and former U.S. senator, at times sounded like the Republican candidates Trump defeated to win his party's presidential nomination. She highlighted the United States' role as a global superpower and celebrated "American exceptionalism," a term frequently used by conservatives in a foreign-policy context.

"When we say America is exceptional ... it means that we recognize America's unique and unparalleled ability to be a force for peace and progress," Clinton told the veterans. "When America fails to lead, we leave a vacuum."

She harshly rebuked Trump, accusing him of advocating a retreat from global affairs and suggesting that his calls for U.S. forces to torture terror suspects and threaten their families would make the country less safe.

The speech came on the same day that Trump metwith Mexico's president, Enrique Pena Nieto, in Mexico City in an attempt to bolster his own foreign-policy profile before delivering a speech on immigration policy Wednesday evening in Arizona. REUTERS

Trump talks border wall, no mention of payment

Donald Trump told Mexican President Enrique Pena Nieto on Wednesday that the United States has the right to build a border wall to halt illegal immigration, but the Republican presidential candidate did not bring up his demand that Mexico pay for it.

In an unexpected trip to a country which he has frequently vilified for illegal immigration and drug smuggling, Trump held talks with the Mexican leader at his residence for about an hour.

"We did discuss the wall, we didn't discuss payment of the wall, that will be at a later date, this was a very preliminary meeting. It was an excellent meeting," Trump said.

In campaign rallies for the Nov. 8 election, the New York businessman frequently tells approving crowds that Mexico must pay for his planned wall.

Pena Nieto told Trump that Mexicans deserved respect.

"The Mexicans in the United States are honest. ... Mexicans deserve the respect of everyone," he said, standing next to Trump.

Mexican opposition politicians heavily criticized Pena Nieto for hosting Trump, who has accused Mexico of sending criminals and rapists across the border and cheating the United States on trade.

A few dozen people gathered beneath a monument to Mexican independence in the center of the capital to protest the visit, some holding placards emblazoned with captions such as "You are not Wall-come" and "Trump and Pena out."

Trump's visit to Mexico City took place hours before he was due to deliver a highly anticipated speech in the border state of Arizona on how he would tackle illegal immigration if he wins the election. REUTERS

New Men's Sex Pill Makes Viagra Obsolete

Soaring demand expected for new scientific advance made just for older men. Works on both men's physical ability and their desire in bed.

By Harlan S. Waxman
Health News Syndicate

New York – If you're like the rest of us guys over 50; you probably already know the truth… "Viagra® doesn't work! Simply getting an erection doesn't fix the problem" says Dr. Bassam Damaj, chief scientific officer at the world famous Innovus Pharma Laboratories.

As we get older, we need more help in bed. Not only does our desire fade; but erections can be soft or feeble, one of the main complaints with Viagra®. Besides, Viagra® is expensive… costing as much as $50.00 a pill.

Plus, it does nothing to stimulate your brain to want sex. "I don't care what you take, if you aren't interested in sex, you can't get or keep an erection. It's physiologically impossible," said Dr. Damaj.

MADE JUST FOR MEN OVER 50

But now, for the first time ever, there's a pill made just for older men. It's called Vesele®. A new pill that helps you get an erection by stimulating your body and your brainwaves. So Vesele® can work even when nothing else worked before.

The new men's pill is not a drug. It's something completely different

Because you don't need a prescription for Vesele®, sales are exploding. The maker just can't produce enough of it to keep up with demand. Even doctors are having a tough time getting their hands on it. So what's all the fuss about?

WORKS ON YOUR HEAD AND YOUR BODY

The new formula takes on erectile problems with a whole new twist. It doesn't just address the physical problems of getting older; it works on the mental part of sex too. Unlike Viagra®, the new pill stimulates your sexual brain chemistry as well. Actually helping you regain the passion and burning desire you had for your partner again. So you will want sex with the hunger and stamina of a 25-year-old.

THE BRAIN/ERECTION CONNECTION

Vesele takes off where Viagra® only begins. Thanks to a discovery made by 3 Nobel-Prize winning scientists; Vesele® has become the first ever patented supplement to harden you and your libido. So you regain your desire as well as the ability to act on it.

In a 16-week clinical study; scientists from the U.S.A. joined forces to prove Nitric Oxide's effects on the cardio vascular system. They showed that Nitric Oxide could not only increase your ability to get an erection, it would also work on your brainwaves to stimulate your desire for sex. The results were remarkable and published in the world's most respected medical journals.

THE SCIENCE OF SEX

The study asked men, 45 to 65 years old to take the main ingredient in Vesele® once a day. Then they were instructed not to change the way they eat or exercise but to take Vesele® twice a day. What happened next was remarkable. Virtually every man in the study who took Vesele® twice a day reported a huge difference in their desire for sex. In layman's terms, they were horny again. They also experienced harder erections that lasted for almost 20 minutes. The placebo controlled group (who received sugar pills) mostly saw no difference.

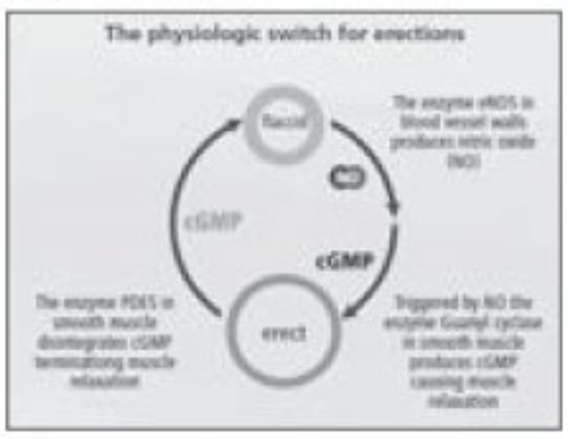
JAW-DROPPING CLINICAL PROOF

- ✓ Satisfaction—Increase from 41.4% to 88.1%
- ✓ Frequency—Increase from 44.9% to 79.5%
- ✓ Desire—Increase from 47.9% to 82%
- ✓ Hardness—Increase from 36.2% to 85.7%
- ✓ Duration—Increase from 35% to 79.5%
- ✓ Hardness—Increase from 36.2% to 85.7%
- ✓ Ability to Satisfy—Increase from 44.1% to 83.3%

AN UNEXPECTED BONUS: The study results even showed an impressive increase in the energy, brain-power and memory of the participants.

SUPPLY LIMITED BY OVERWHELMING DEMAND

"Once we saw the results we knew we had a game-changer said Dr. Damaj. We get hundreds of calls a day from people begging us for a bottle. It's been crazy. We try to meet the crushing demand for Vesele®."



DOCTOR: "VESELE® PASSED THE TEST"

"As a doctor, I've studied the effectiveness of Nitric Oxide on the body and the brain. I'm impressed by the way it increases cerebral and penile blood flow. The result is evident in the creation of Vesele®. It's sure-fire proof that the mind/body connection is unbeatable when achieving and maintaining an erection and the results are remarkable" said Dr. Damaj. (His findings are illustrated in the charts below.)

New men's pill overwhelms your senses with sexual desire as well as firmer, long-lasting erections. There's never been anything like it before.

HERE'S WHAT MEN ARE SAYING

- I'm ready to go sexually and mentally.
- More frequent erections in the night (while sleeping) and in the morning.
- I have seen a change in sexual desire.
- Typically take 1 each morning and 1 each night. Great stamina results!
- An increased intensity in orgasms.
- My focus (mental) has really improved… Huge improvement.
- Amazing orgasms!
- I really did notice a great improvement in my ability.

HOW TO GET VESELE®

This is the first official public release of Vesele® since its news release. In order to get the word out about Vesele®, Innovus Pharma is offering special introductory discounts to all who call.

A special phone hotline has been set up for readers in your area; to take advantage of special discounts during this ordering opportunity. Special discounts will be available starting today at 6:00am. The discounts will automatically be applied to all callers. The Special TOLL-FREE Hotline number is 1-800-583-5956 and will be open 24-hours a day.

Only 300 bottles of Vesele® are currently available in your region. Consumers who miss out on our current product inventory will have to wait until more become available. But this could take weeks. The maker advises your best chance is to call 1-800-583-5956 early.

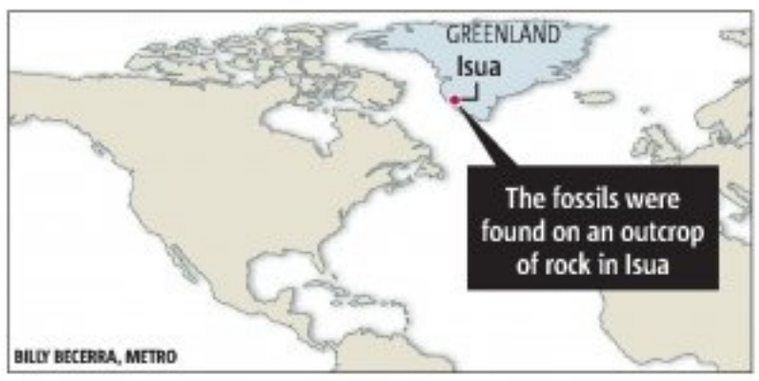
Oldest fossils found in Greenland, from time Earth was like Mars

The earliest fossil evidence of life on Earth has been found in rocks 3.7 billion years old in Greenland, raising chances of life on Mars aeons ago when both planets were similarly desolate, scientists said on Wednesday.

The experts found tiny humps, between 0.4 and 1.6 inches tall, in rocks at Isua in southwest Greenland that they said were fossilized groups of microbes similar to ones now found in seas from Bermuda to Australia.

If confirmed as fossilized communities of bacteria known as stromatolites — rather than a freak natural formation — the lumps would pre-date fossils found in Australia as the earliest evidence of life on Earth by 220 million years.

"This indicates the Earth was no longer some sort of hell 3.7 billion years ago," lead author Allen Nutman, of the University of Wollongong, told Reuters of the findings that were published in the journal Nature.



"It was a place where life could flourish."

Earth formed about 4.6 billion years ago and the relative sophistication of stromatolites indicated that life had evolved quickly after a bombardment by asteroids ended about 4 billion years ago.

"Stromatolites contain billions of bacteria … they're making the equivalent of apartment complexes," said Martin Van Kranendonk, a co-author at the University of New South Wales who identified the previously oldest fossils, dating from 3.48 billion years ago.

At the time stromatolites started growing in gooey masses on a forgotten seabed, the Earth was probably similar to Mars with liquid water at the surface, orbiting a sun that was 30 percent dimmer than today, the scientists said.

Those parallels could be a new spur to study whether Mars once had life, the authors said.

"Suddenly, Mars may look even more promising than before as a potential abode for past life," Abigail Allwood, of the California Institute of Technology, wrote in a commentary in Nature.

The Greenland find was made after a retreat of snow and ice exposed long-hidden rocks. Greenland's government hopes that a thaw linked to global warming will have positive spin-offs, such as exposing more minerals.

Nutman said the main controversy was likely to be that the fossils were in metamorphic rocks, reckoned to have formed under huge stress with temperatures up to 1,022 degrees Fahrenheit — usually too high to preserve any trace of life.

Still, Van Kranendonk told Reuters that dried-out biological material could sometimes survive such a baking, adding he was "absolutely convinced" by the Greenland fossils. REUTERS

Alicia Vikander and Michael Fassbender play a couple in post-World War I Australia who make a horrible decision in "The Light Between Oceans." DAVI RUSSO

Alicia Vikander goes to the dark side

THE FUN STARTS HERE

The Oscar-winner talks "The Light Between Oceans" and being bad at American football.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

After winning an Oscar, Alicia Vikander is taking it easy — sort of. Last year she had eight films. This year she "only" has two. They offer very different challenges, though. In "Jason Bourne" she stormed into her first action movie. In the new "The Light Between Oceans," the latest from Derek Cianfrance ("Blue Valentine"), she goes to truly dark places.

In "Oceans," Vikander plays Isabel, a young woman in post-World War I Australia who marries a shy lighthouse keeper (played by her real-life paramour Michael Fassbender). When they're unable to sire a child, they wind up keeping a baby girl they rescued from a boating accident — and, less nobly, not returning her when they later meet her biological mother (Rachel Weisz). The Oscar-winner, 27, talks to us about making a film in remote Australia and being good at at least one type of football.

Derek Cianfrance seems like one of those filmmakers actors die to work with.

I contacted him before I even knew "The Light Between Oceans" was going to be made. I wanted to know how he worked, because his films always feel so authentic and real. I always feel when I'm in my seat at the cinema that I shouldn't be in the same rooms as the characters. They feel very private.

He has a very unusual way of shooting, including starting scenes earlier than written. How did you adjust to it?

The first time I met [Derek], he said, "I expect my actors to fail and to surprise me. And in return I will give them experiences and memories." He kept his word. It's always tough to take that leap, to believe and not be afraid. And it's easy, in whatever you do, to repeat something that works. But by doing these things, you had someone who led you down a new path. Because everything just happened. They were different each time. There was a lot of nerve involved, but I think it really brings an edge and a reality to it.

Most of this film was shot on location on a remote Australian peninsula, with a small crew and a very small number of actors. Were you reluctant to have that level of intimacy and isolation?

Derek really didn't want us to get off [the peninsula]. He said, "I want the whole crew to stay out there Monday through Friday and live there while we're shooting." I remember thinking, "That's taking it a bit too far." [Laughs] I said to him, "I'm not Method. I will do a deep dive [into the work], but I kind of need to have a normal life, too." I think everyone felt the same way. We agreed to give him two days a week. We'd get up early in the morning and watch the sunrises. We cooked our food and had barbecues and played football. It was a drama camp kind of thing.

How's your football?

I'm very bad.

And is this American football or what Americans call soccer?

It was American, which I had never played before. I do play soccer, or what I consider to be football.

If we read the story of what happens to Tom and Isabel in a newspaper, we'd certainly think of them as monsters. But the movie allows us to see their life before they made the decision, therefore making us empathize with people we'd probably write off.

When we hear the dilemma they have, we know what's right and what's wrong. I actually wanted to play a villain, because I'm so used to not playing that. But I couldn't see her that way. That's what happens when you get the backstory when you learn what led them down a certain path. It's a gray zone. That's a very good thing to bring into the world we're in at the moment.

"Morgan"

Director: Luke Scott
Stars: Kate Mara, Anya Taylor-Joy
Rating: R

Pseudo-science thriller "Morgan" manages the impressive feat of being simultaneously moronic yet utterly indistinct. It's as if director Luke Scott, son of Ridley, saw "Ex-Machina" and thought, "Hmm, this movie's pretty good, but it could use fewer ideas and more people getting punched in the face." It belongs to that timeless genre of "smart scientists making fatally stupid mistakes." Scott appears to have inherited his father's affinity for stupid geniuses, which feature prominently in Ridley's "Prometheus" — a movie that at least compensates with prodigious spectacle.

"Morgan" concerns a group of scientists who decide to engender a self-aware human-hybrid (Anya Taylor-Joy), which is the kind of foolish endeavor only undertaken by scientists who are not long for this world. The reasons for creating this hybrid are never sufficiently addressed, since, unlike the titular prototype, this is not a movie that possesses the gift of self-awareness.

Kate Mara, right, plays an assassin assigned to take out a human-hybrid (Anya Taylor-Joy) in "Morgan." AIDAN MONAGHAN

The scientists (Toby Jones, Rose Leslie, Michelle Yeoh — all wasted) spout pontifications as vacuous as empty wine glasses, while Kate Mara, playing an assassin who also handles risk management assessment, stares at them with hostility. She immediately realizes that Morgan, who stabs Jennifer Jason Leigh in the eye during the opening seconds (Leigh doesn't really mind), is unstable. Taylor-Joy, sublime in this year's "The Witch," is given nothing to do. She looks like she's struggling to find depth that just isn't there.

The most surprising thing about "Morgan," which is relentlessly predicable, is that it looks and sounds so bland. You'd think Ridley Scott, who co-produced the film, would imbue the movie with some sort of pizazz. Instead, it has a color scheme that resembles a dirty sidewalk and a score as interesting as a malfunctioning dial-up modem tone.

The only memorable scene involves Paul Giamatti, who shows up to do some acting. He plays a weirdly abrasive psychologist who yells at the unstable subject in order to provoke a plot point. He chews scenery; Morgan chews him. MATT PRIGGE

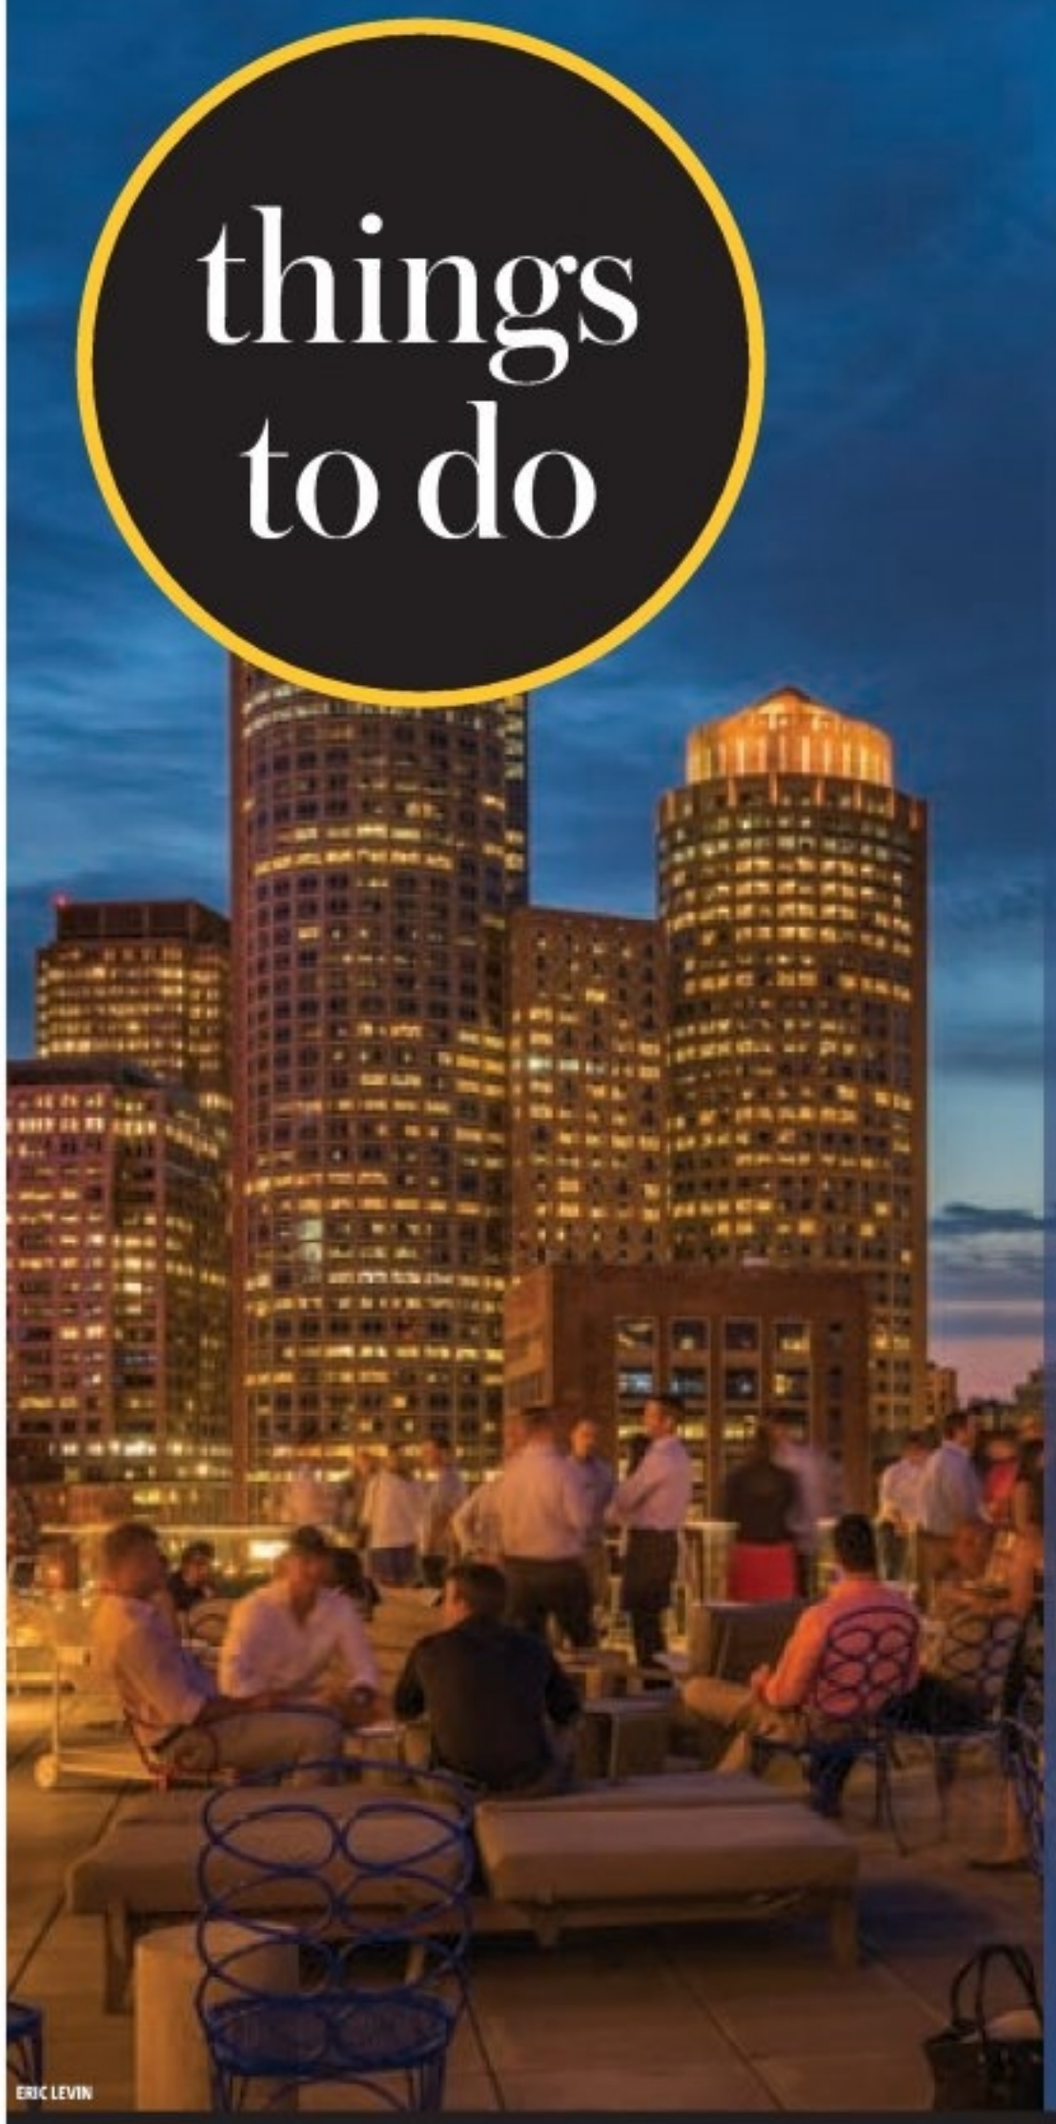
Illuminate & indulge

The city's Labor Day fireworks celebration is more than a sparkling summer send off — it's an excuse to indulge in the last of the season's edible bounty. LINDA CLARKE



ERIC LEVIN

Do you really need an excuse for one last summer stroll through the harbor and seaport; or a reason to enjoy food flavored with summer bounty alfresco before fall kicks in? If you do, then here it is: Illuminate on the Harbor, a special summer's end fireworks display presented by Boston Harbor Now and the Boston Harbor Hotel. Saturday, beginning at 8:30 p.m., fireworks are launched from two locations — one in the Seaport and another in the North End for a citywide spectacle.

Labor Day marks the emotional end of summer, so enjoy the seaport: stroll the Harborwalk, and enjoy some summery food and drinks before the night sky lights up.

As Illuminate's co-host, the Boston Harbor Hotel's Rowes Wharf Sea Grille's terrace offers an ideal fireworks vantage point with Snapchat-worthy sunset views. Summer is when a raw bar makes most sense: choose the seafood platter with Cherrystone clams, New England oysters, jumbo shrimp and lobster; or lobster guacamole; or spicy Caribbean-style jerk shrimp with a squeeze of lime. But save room for the sublime creamy strawberry buttermilk shortcake with a strawberry mousse topping and vanilla Chantilly cream. It's the most elegant strawberry shortcake you'll ever eat. (70 Rowes Wharf. 617-856-7754, roweswharfseagrille.com)

Tucked around the corner, at the end of Northern Avenue — that is if the city would fix the fine old bridge and reinstate this cool part of the Harborwalk — Committee brings Mediterranean flavor to the Seaport, and nothing pays tribute to sunshine like the cuisine of Greece. The watermelon dakos is part bruschetta, part panzanella: chunks of red and yellow watermelon, teardrop tomatoes, mint and feta cheese laced in a raspberry ouzo vinaigrette are piled over paximadia, a rustic rusk-type bread common to Crete. (50 Northern Ave. 617-737-5051, committeeboston.com)

On Sleeper Street, Outlook Kitchen and Bar and Lookout Rooftop Bar in the Envoy Hotel are two options for en plein air noshing and drinking: Start at one and end at the other. Outlook is the ground floor restaurant while the eighth-story Lookout does drinks and nibbles with a view of the harbor and the city. Very pretty, especially with a cooling cocktail like the Juliet and Romeo – Wire Works gin with mint, cucumber and rosewater. Downstairs on the Outlook patio, enjoy chilled shrimp and Hamachi ceviche, or a take of a Caprese salad, which pairs local tomatoes and a vinaigrette made with sweet corn. (70 Sleeper St., 617-530-1559, outlookkitchenandbar.com)

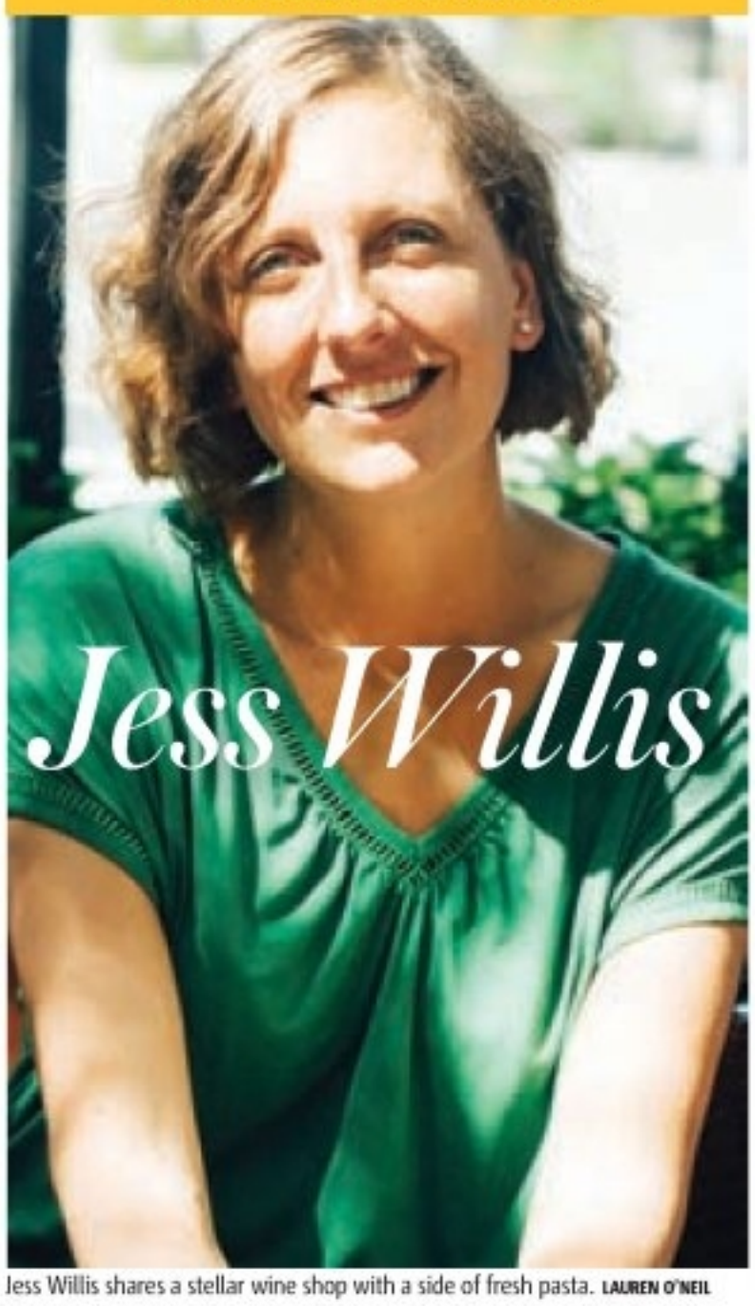
EAT LIKE AN INSIDER



Jess Willis shares a stellar wine shop with a side of fresh pasta. LAUREN O'NEIL

As the chief operating Officer of the Independent Restaurant Group (Somerville faves — the Independent, Foundry on Elm, Saloon, River Bar and Brass Union), Jess Willis knows what makes a good meal. But what does she crave after a long night out? "A glass of Whistle Pig."

It's an honest answer. The 45-year-old Somervillian talks her favorite places to get a quiet solo brunch in Teele Square and reminds us of an often-forgotten (but totally delectable) South End favorite.

Best hidden gem?

"Nothing is really hidden anymore, but the Wine Shop at Dave's Fresh Pasta is a true gem to me. They carry a small but delightful selection of wine — small producers, mostly old world-styles, really great food wines. I stop in pretty regularly to browse. I always find something new to try."
81 Holland St., Somerville, davesfreshpasta.com

Best place to dine alone?

"With three kids and five restaurants to attend to, I rarely have the chance to dine alone. Every once in a while, I enjoy sneaking away for a quiet breakfast by myself at Renee's Café in Teele Square."
198 Holland St., Somerville, 617-623-2727

Go-to date spot?

"My husband and I had a standing Friday lunch date at the Druid for quite some time. We don't get there as often these days, but it is still one of my favorite places to spend an afternoon with him."
1357 Cambridge St., Cambridge, druidpub.com

Best place to catch up with friends?

"Delux Café — my friends and I have been meeting up there since the '90s. We camp out for hours, drinking gin and tonics. Being there makes me very happy, a little nostalgic and always pleasantly tipsy!"

Salvador Jiménez-Flores: No One Discovered the Americas

While it was once dogma in elementary schools, the notion that Christopher Columbus "discovered" the Americas is more often invoked today for ridicule than affirmation. But what does it even mean to "discover" a place, and a people? That's the question mixed-media artist Salvador Jiménez-Flores asks through this new body of work, in which the pre-Columbian collides with the present.

Fodor's Travel

Amalfi Coast GETTY IMAGES

Amalfi Coast, Italy

Indulge in la dolce vita with extravagant shopping, long wine-fueled lunches and lazy afternoons on the beach in what is undeniably one of the most romantic places in the world. For a short visit, base yourself in Positano and do a few day trips, but if you have time, try and do an overnight in Capri and Ravello.

Hong Kong GETTY IMAGES

The Maldives

Find complete seclusion in a tropical setting. You'll spend your days lounging in the sun, feasting on fresh fish and luxuriating in the plunge pool of your overwater bungalow. There are 200 different islands to choose from and each one is a little slice of paradise.

Hong Kong

This city is for active travelers who want to experience a new place together on their honeymoon. Hong Kong is one of the food capitals of the world, so it's a good idea to spend your days restaurant-hopping and trying everything that the city has to offer — from traditional Cantonese to trendy modern Italian. If you get tired of city life, hike the Dragon's Back for a bird's-eye view of Victoria Harbour or head to nearby Repulse Bay for some beach time.

Marrakech

This bustling city is a romantic setting for honeymooners. Spend your days shopping in the souks, getting spa treatments at a traditional hammam, and finding hidden gem restaurants at night. If you have the time, head into the Atlas Mountains for a glamping experience.

Whitsunday Islands

You can't find more picture-perfect beaches than the secluded white strands of the Whitsunday Islands. A national park situated right on the Great Barrier Reef, the Whitsundays are perfect for couples that want to scuba dive and snorkel. Rent a sailboat to explore the islands or just relax on one of the perfect beaches.

Utah

With five national parks (and countless state parks and national monuments), Utah should be on every traveler's list. The southern part of the state is full of natural wonders like the spires of Bryce Canyon, Arizona's iconic wave and the red walls of Glen Canyon.

Loire Valley

Spend your days drinking Champagne, touring wineries and chateaux, and spending the night at posh bed-and-breakfasts in the Loire Valley. Don't miss famous Chenonceau and Chambord, and make sure to visit one of the nearby wineries.

Iceland

A short direct flight from the U.S. makes this a hassle-free destination that combines a thriving music, arts and nightlife scene with a sublime natural backdrop. Explore the waterfalls, glaciers and volcanoes around the island before relaxing at the Blue Lagoon on your way home.

Big Sur

You don't have to go far to experience isolated luxury in a beautiful setting. The coastal community of Big Sur, California, combines a laid-back attitude with a gorgeous cliff-side location. Sip local wines, go for a hike or have a picnic on the beach.

OPINION

@dannypicard

It was bound to happen. A quarterback controversy in New England. Tom Brady vs Jimmy Garoppolo vs Bill Belichick. Egos have collided. Selfishness reigns supreme. This will never end well.

Nevermind. That's just what the kings and queens of Boston sports media will tell you. Mainly because that's what they want. They want a controversy. They want egos to collide. They want some type of quarterback rift in Foxboro.

Back here on planet Earth, while the Patriots' quarterback dynamic is certainly unique this season because of Brady's four-game Deflategate suspension, it's in no way creating the type of controversy that some major voices in this town will tell you.

Through three preseason games, Garoppolo has been the priority, just like I told he should be back in July, and just like Belichick told you he would be at the beginning of training camp. But last Friday in Carolina for the third preseason game — otherwise known as the "dress rehearsal" — Brady took his first in-game snaps of the year.

Brady entered the game late in the first quarter and played four possessions, going 3-of-9 for 76 yards and a touchdown. Garoppolo made the start, played three possessions before handing it off to Brady, and then re-entered the game in the second quarter, through most of the third.

The mere presence of Brady on the sideline in that game rubbed some fans and media members the wrong way. These people didn't even think he should have made the trip to Carolina. But since he did, he played. And since he played, in their minds, it interfered with Garoppolo's progression as the team's starting quarterback.

In reality though, the Patriots did exactly what they wanted to do, which was establish Garoppolo as the starting quarterback in the most meaningful game of the preseason.

A few of the moments that made people bring up the word "controversy" included Brady leading the team onto the field before Friday's game against the Panthers, little to no interaction between Brady and Garoppolo on the sideline during that same game, and of course, Brady "stealing" several possessions with the "1s."

First off, it shouldn't matter who leads the team out to the field. Even if you think it should matter, last time I checked, this is still Brady's team. He'll just be missing the first four weeks of the regular season.

And since he'll be MIA, that leads me to my next point, about his interaction with Garoppolo on the sideline during the game. While Brady serves his suspension and is away from the team, he won't be around to help Garoppolo during games. So it's more than likely that Brady staying away from Garoppolo and offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels in between possessions was the plan all along.

Why? Because it was the dress rehearsal. And what's a dress rehearsal for? The actual performance. And that performance is Week 1 in Arizona. Garoppolo will get the start. Brady will be home on his couch.

As for Brady "stealing" possessions with the '1s,' what did you think? That he wouldn't be getting any snaps in the preseason? He can still get some playing time while Garoppolo remains the priority. After all, Brady will be returning as the Patriots' starting quarterback in Week 5 — I don't care what Garoppolo does the first four weeks.

There's no QB controversy here, writes Danny Picard. GETTY IMAGES

Brady knows that. Belichick knows that. Garoppolo knows that.

And they all need Garoppolo to have success before Brady takes over in Week 5, which is another reason why there's no quarterback controversy.

If there was any type of QB controversy in New England, it was created by Jacoby Brissett. Brissett has made all the big throws. He seems to have it all under control when he's under center. He looks the part, and his preseason performances have shortened Garoppolo's leash when the regular season begins, in my opinion.

So it was bound to happen. A quarterback controversy in New England. It just doesn't include Brady.

Red Sox need to take care of business out West

It's officially September, baseball's final full calendar month, and the Red Sox are poised to make the postseason for the first time since they won it all in 2013.

There's still plenty of winning to be done between now and Oct. 3. The Sox are battling with the Blue Jays and Orioles for first place in the division and teams like the Tigers, Astros and Royals in the AL Wild Card standings.

Taking care of business against weak clubs like the A's will be key for the Sox if they want to ride comfortably into October. Oakland will host the Sox this weekend, starting with a Friday night tilt that will feature David Price (13-8, 3.97 ERA) on the mound for the Sox. Rick Porcello (18-3, 3.26 ERA) and Eduardo Rodriguez (2-6, 5.35 ERA) will get the ball on Saturday and Sunday, respectively.

The Sox will then face the Padres in San Diego for three games, beginning on Monday, and will wrap up their road trip for three against Toronto.

Aries Look at change as an opportunity. Adjusting to what's happening around you will allow you to see the positive aspects of the situation and take advantage of the benefits.

Taurus Socializing with peers will be informative. You'll pick up interesting ideas that will play a role in some of your own plans. Collaborate and see where it takes you.

Gemini Emotional mishaps can be expected if you aren't precise. False information and empty promises are apparent, and must be dealt with tactfully. Focus on self-improvement.

Cancer Concentrate on learning, staying informed and making plans . A day trip will lead to an unusual encounter with someone offering a deal that's too good to refuse.

Leo An important relationship will help you achieve your goals. The support you receive and the ideas that spring from discussions you have will set you on a fruitful course.

Virgo Opportunity is within your reach. Don't risk missing out because someone is being needy or trying to make you feel guilty. Call the shots and take responsibility.

Libra Try to understand what the people close to you are experiencing. Tolerance and understanding will be necessary if you want to avoid drama. Focus on self-improvement.

Scorpio Put your heart and soul into whatever project you take on. A creative approach will show any competition that you are not one to mess with. Do your own thing.

Sagittarius Deception and disillusionment will set in if you are gullible and you believe everything you hear. Don't worry about what others do or say. Take pride in yourself.

Capricorn Keep your emotions out of any financial, legal or medical decision that you have to make. Look beyond what's being offered and try to introduce something you discover.

Aquarius Find a way to cut corners and free up some cash. Use your keen awareness to seek out alternative ways to make your money grow. Romance is on the rise.

Pisces It won't be good enough to express your ideas; you must be prepared to take action as well. Criticism will result if you show hesitation or lack consistency. EUGENIA LAST
